Muddle Unsettled.

Yet Appointed.

GENERAL ROSECRANS.

His Late Interview with Confederate Generals.

THE INTERNAL REVENUE MURDER.

The Rollins-McCulloch deal looks more like a muddle than an adjustment. In the meantime the substantial interests of the Internal Revenue Department are suffering not a little for the want of the proper officials to attend to the affairs.

The responsibility for the state of affairs rests with Commissioner Rollins—who represents the revenue—as much as with Secretary McCulloch—who favors the conservative view, to make make the appointment, but with characteristic radical head-onness contended for the whole of the patronage to be gained by the appointment. The President will doubtless settle the matter before the end of the week by the suspension of Mr. Rollins upon charges. Attorney General Davis is now said to be engaged in the preparation of an opinion sustaining the prospective action of the President.

It will return to this city tomorrow. He met with a very cordial reception by the ex-Confederate Generals and others, at White Sulphur Springs, with whom he has been in consultation concerning a plan for future action, the details of which will be published in a day or two.

NEW ORLEANS COLLECTORSHIP.

This lone of contention has grown to be a very difficult question for the President to decide, there being so many aspirants who are willing to make the sacrifice and leave the dangers of yellow fever, etc., and who are equally as ready as others are equally ready. Secretary Browning, who is the prince of black-mailers, is urging Perry Feller, the big Indian contractor, for the position.

THE PRESIDENT, though somewhat indisposed for several days, was well enough to attend the Cabinet meeting today. The unexpected developments of business which require Executive attention is fast making the trip grow smaller by degrees and beautifully less.

The members of the Masonic order in this city are making preparations to attend the Triennial Conclave of the United States, which convenes in St. Louis on the 10th of next month, which promises to be one of the most notable meetings of this ancient and honorable organization. The President has received a letter from the order, in which they request that he grant a leave of absence for nine days to the Knights Templar in the executive departments who desire to be present, which he has referred to the heads of the various departments with a favorable recommendation.

happy, and united country. [Loud cheers.]

Mr. Franklin, on resuming his address, was greeted with loud and long-continued applause.

A great many persons consider Mr. Schneider very rich, and on her supposed wealth have been based many of the calumnies which have been circulated about the Diva. For several years past she has received an exceedingly large salary, every one of which she has bestowed, and although she is by no means parsimonious, she has doubtless laid aside quite a handsome sum. Yet her fortune falls far short of the fabulous sums which rumor has asserted that she possessed.

she testified to was true as far as it went, and the wedding did take place." Cox, in his deposition on the 25th of August, 1850, being examined on his wife's evaded answering whether he was interested in the suit or not; yet it is well known that he was deeply interested in holding the lands of my father (worth several millions) which had been fraudulently conveyed to him by Chew & Reif—his partnership with my father having been terminated and settled in the year 1851. His testimony was therefore essentially rendered with the view of defrauding me of the grand inheritance, and in consequence the fraud perpetrated by him and Chew & Reif.

He found his way to his brain; his head was bound up in wet towels, and veins on his brow swollen to a fearful degree. When the next issue of the Citizen came out, with the exception of a few columns on the first page, the paper was filled with the articles of Gen. Halpin; poems, story, essays, paragraphs, leader, criticisms of all kinds, were his own, and he did not mainly of these seventeen hours of untended labor.

of the world. Of the Parliamenters, sixteen are phonographers, make summaries of the debate in shorthand, and one directs the vote. To the types there are one hundred thirty compositors employed, sixty printed by day, and seventy at night, eleven foremen and assistants direct the movements. Twenty-four persons are required to read proof, and three are employed merely to "pull" the proofs. The arrangements are set up during the day, the reading matter during the night, advertising pages being made up at five to seven o'clock in the evening. Reading matter is received until daybreak and afterward, and the reading pages the people consented readily to the destruction of the entrails and the meat insinuated on saving the hides; and, when Parliament voted compensation, the municipal officers were troubled in enforcing the usual measures.

The most comprehensive knowledge in regard to the whole matter is the report of the commissioner appointed by Great Britain to inquire into the nature and of the cattle plague. This report to Parliament gives, almost the appearance of the skin membrane during the dissemination of the virus, and the further history of the disease in the United Kingdom, and the time taken for the virus to travel from one place to another. One of the most interesting parts of the report is the account of the manner in which the virus was introduced into the country, and the manner in which it was spread.
